HOW TO BEAT THE BULLY

An Anti-Bullying Script by

These are the “anti-bullying” strategies used in the creation of this Readers Theater script:

Stay in a group. Kids who bully like to pick on kids who are by themselves a lot—it's easier and they're more likely to get away with their bad behavior. If you spend more time with other kids, you may not be an easy "target" and you'll have others around to help you if you get into a difficult situation!

Always tell an adult. It's hard to talk about serious things with adults sometimes, but they can help put a stop to bullying. Tell an adult that you trust and can talk to - your parents, your teacher, your school counselor, your coach, your neighbor. If you've told a grown-up before and they haven't done anything about it, tell someone else. And if you're afraid to tell an adult that you have been bullied, get another person - like a friend or a sister or brother - to go with you. Having someone else there to support you can make it a lot less scary. Tell the adults exactly what has happened - who did the bullying, where and when it happened, how long it's been happening to you, and how it's making you feel. If you talk with an adult at your school, ask them what they will do to help stop the bullying. It is their job to help keep you safe. Most adults really care about bullying and will do everything they can to help you.

If it feels safe, try to stand up to the person who is bullying you. If the person who is bullying you thinks you won't do anything about it, they are more likely to keep picking on you. This doesn't mean you should fight back or bully them back. Instead, tell the person bullying you that you don't like it and that they should stop! Keep it simple. You might just say, "Cut it out, Miranda!", and then walk away. If possible, try to talk to them in a calm voice. Kids who bully often like to see that they can make you upset. If you're afraid to talk to the person who is bullying you by yourself, then you might want to ask someone else to be there with you. Kids who bully are more likely to listen, and less likely to bully you, when you're with someone and not alone. If you're not comfortable standing up to someone who has bullied you, that's definitely OK! Just walk away. But be sure to tell an adult.

SIGNS: To perform this Readers Theater script, create and hang signs around each character's neck telling the audience the name of that character. (Example: VICTIM, BULLY, FRIEND, BYSTANDER, MOTHER, etc.)

Since most RT productions do not involve much stage movement, either ask some of the characters who have smaller parts or appoint additional students to hold up large signs at the proper moments during the play. The signs are meant to inform the audience where the action is taking place and which stage movements are happening at the time. (Examples: BULLY HITS VICTIM IN FACE, VICTIM RUNS AWAY, SCENE 1 - OUTSDIE THE SCHOOLYARD, SCENE 2 – NEXT DAY IN THE SCHOOLYARD, etc.)

SET-UP OF READING AREA: Place BULLY and VICTIM in center of reading/performance area. Arrange other readers to the left and right of these readers.

4 HOW TO BEAT THE BULLY

ENTRANCE: VICTIM, BULLY, BYSTANDERS 1&2 enter the performance area and take their positions. They either carry their scripts (and hold them throughout the reading) or the scripts may be preset on music stands placed directly in front of each reader's position. The readers stand BTA (with their backs facing the audience).

TO BEGIN: When it is time to begin a sign that says "HOW TO BEAT THE BULLY" is held up and shown to the audience. Another sign is held up that says "SCENE 1 - OUTSIDE THE SCHOOLYARD". (These sign-holders may also announce the words on their signs to emphasize the title, action, setting, if desired). As the sign-holders exit, VICTIM turns to face the audience and reads the first line below. BULLY immediately turns to face the audience and delivers the second line – and the play has begun.

SCENE ONE

Scene One involves the bully, victim, and 2 bystanders who do nothing until the bully engages them in his victorious laughter at the scene's end. The bully and the bystanders are blocking the path to the victim's home.

(Sign-Holders enter).

SIGN: HOW TO BEAT THE BULLY

SIGN: SCENE 1 - OUTSIDE THE SCHOOLYARD.

(As the Sign-Holders exit, VICTIM turns to face the audience and reads the first line below. BULLY immediately turns to face the audience and delivers the second line).
